We face many kinds of darkness in our lives and in our world: greed and selfishness, injustice and hatred, war, disaster, inequality, corruption, and the effects of climate change among them.

The good news of Christmas is that a great light shines into our darkness.

When Pope Francis canonized Mother Teresa this year, he said, “For Mother Teresa, mercy was the light which shone in the darkness of the many who no longer had tears to shed for their poverty and suffering.” Francis also said, “Today too, amid so much darkness, we need to see the light of hope and to be men and women who bring hope to others.”

Let's join together this Christmas in bringing the light of hope to others!

A Great Light

“The people who walked in darkness
have seen a great light;
those who lived in a land of deep darkness—on them light has shined...
For a child has been born for us.”

Rebuilding in Haiti

Hurricane Matthew struck Haiti on 4 October, causing widespread destruction and suffering. Jesuit agencies first responded with food and hygiene kits, and are now also working to repair and rebuild schools and restore livelihoods, especially in agriculture. CJJ is coordinating its response with the Xavier Network and Foi et Joie.

Agriculture in Latin America

Food security and food sovereignty are two of the key priorities of Comparte (Share), a program of the Jesuit Conference of Latin American Provinces. CJJ actively supports Comparte, which promotes collaborative learning and action in 13 countries to ensure that economic processes are inclusive and environmentally sustainable.

Peace in Syria

Conflict and violence still prevail in Syria, and peace may be a long way off. But Jesuit Refugee Service (JRS) continues to alleviate suffering and lay foundations for a future peace by providing displaced people with food and other basics, offering psychosocial services, educating children, and showing that people of different faiths can still live together. CJJ supports the work of JRS in Syria.

Economic Justice in India

The Human Life and Development Resource Centre (HLDR), which CJJ supports, is a place of great hope in India. Many of the people it accompanies are former tea estate workers who faced exploitation, injustice and extreme poverty. HLDR is helping former tea workers and other marginalized people to retrain and to claim their legal rights.
