

Jesu Ashram Reflection

By Aryan Parhar

The webinar featuring Jesu Ashram was an emotional and inspirational period of information. Until that day I was under the assumption that leprosy was all but a thing of the past, I had not an idea that it was still a very thing. This piece of knowledge had me very intrigued so when I got home I did some research and found out that there have been a few cases of leprosy in the United States in recent years, which came to a total shock to me. Though it is easy to let fear consume us in a matter like this, it combats the fear to know that people like those at the Jesu Ashram establishment are helping those with leprosy continue their lives. The admirability and heroism of people like father ~~Pat~~^{Julius} is outstanding and I wish more people were like him today, the Jesu Ashram establishment is a Catholic one and I believe that is important to identifying who they are today and how they operate. Religion is very important to all societies around the globe, religion can act as an extremely powerful motivator and that's what I think motivates the employees and patients to keep their eyes forward. This has been my Jesu Ashram reflection.
